2nd Edition of this document released on December 10, 2021 at Sri Amritsar Sahib, dedicated to human rights lawyers and activists fighting for the United Nations commemorates the declaration of Human Rights Day Released on December 10, 1948.

About Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act

Opposition to black law is essential:

Governments in all the times have resorted to all sorts of manoeuvres to suppress political opponents, those seeking their rights and rebels who oppose injustice as the governments do not want anyone to raise their voice against their oppression. The pre-1947 British rule in India also adopted various methods of stifling people's voices which continue today in one form or another. The most infamous is the Rowlatt Act passed in 1919 under which any person could be imprisoned for up to 2 years without any offense and the provisions of Chapter VI (121, 124-A) of the Indian Penal (IPC) has been in operation since the days of British colonial rule. The British had to leave India in 1947 according to the world situation but the condition of the common people of India did not improve. Even though they initially thought that they would enjoy fruits of freedom, their dreams soon began to crumble as they fell into the clutches of the new rulers. Most of the people adapted to these new rulers but some people continued to fight for their rights against this new regime in the same way as they were fighting against British rule. In this struggle Sikhs, Nagas, Assamese, Kashmiris, Maoists, Dalits, Tamils, tribals and others also raised their voices against the Delhi Darbar.

To deal with these political opponents and those expressing their free will, the first PD Act (The Prevention Detention Act-1950) was enacted and continued until 1971 until the enactment of the MISA (Maintenance of Internal Security Act) which was withdrawn in 1977; and NSA (National Security Act-1980) was enacted in 1980. Then on May 23, 1985, a new act called TADA - Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act was enacted under which thousands were arrested all over India, especially in Punjab. According to a survey, out of the total number of persons arrested under TADA, only one percent were convicted and the rest were acquitted by courts. It shows that TADA was used to keep arrested persons in jail for a maximum period of time. The Act was amended in 1987, 1989, 1991 and 1993 and was finally allowed to lapse in May 1995. On the same lines, the POTA (Prevention of Terrorism Act) was enacted on March 28, 2002, which was withdrawn on December 21, 2004 due to strong opposition by human rights groups and the people.

Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA)

Ironically, when POTA was withdrawn on December 21, 2004, exactly three months before that, on September 21, 2004, a new chapter was inserted in the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967. This Chapter 4 comprises the same sections that were present in TADA and POTA and on 31st December 2008 many more sections were added to make its teeth sharper and in 2013 new sections were added to it. It may be mentioned here that TADA's sections 3, 4, 5, 8 and other administrative provisions; POTA's sections 3, 4, 5, 8 and other administrative provisions and UAPA sections 15, 16, 23, 24 and many other administrative provisions are exactly the same. It shows that the present day UAPA is a revival of TADA and POTA.

About 112 cases:

In Punjab about 112 cases have been registered under UAPA since 2009. This document is based on details of these 112 cases. The information is based on court orders, jail records and media reports. As a lawyer I have pursued the case against myself and many other cases. I am thankful to many lawyers who have encouraged this work. It may be mentioned that out of these 112 cases, only 3 cases (serial number 7, 15, 27) were convicted under UAPA out of which 2 have been acquitted by the High Court and appeal in one case is pending in the High Court. No appeal has been filed by the state against the acquitted cases.

In these 112 UAPA cases, 50 cases have been decided while 62 are still pending. When we analyse decided cases it comes out that arrested persons were either acquitted or discharged under UAPA though some of them were convicted under other laws. Noteworthy point is that the invocation of UAPA failed to pass the judicial test during the trials.

UAPA cases are a clear example of how a person's life is pushed into an abyss. For example, when a pistol is recovered from a person without a license, he usually gets bail from a magistrate level court within ten days or so; but when the UAPA is invoked in such a case, the arrested person will not get bail even from the High Court after years, as happened in the case of Ludhiana resident Kulvir Singh Hira (see serial number 17). Even further, the UAPA is responsible for the deteriorating social and economic condition of a person who has been acquitted after 2 to 5 years of detention and 4/5 years after registration of the case. In a case (serial number 5), Sukhjinder Kaur was kept in custody with her husband Balbir Singh for about 5 years and later she was acquitted. Even her husband was acquitted under UAPA. Evidently undue invocation of UAPA was responsible for the 5 year detention of Sukhjinder Kaur.

Similarly, on Bhai Daljit Singh Bittu, five cases were registered under UAPA and all these five cases were acquitted. Notably these five cases were actually cloned cases.

In another case, when Bhai Kulveer Singh Barapind was arrested, big claims were made by the police in the media but all the cases fell flat in the courts. While investigating the Rulda Singh murder case of Patiala (serial number 4) some arrests were made by the police from Malaysia. Massive claims were laid and police tried to create an atmosphere of fear. The case was acquitted and all claims of police and prosecution fell flat during trial.

Pattern of UAPA cases:

If we look at the structure of the UAPA cases, it is clear that the government has prepared the same type of template under which these cases are registered and even the texts of most of the cases look as if it was copied and pasted on a computer. There are some special procedural instructions required to be followed in UAPA cases, but the police or prosecution agencies seldom follow these instructions. For example, a UAPA case cannot be investigated by a police officer below the rank of DSP, the court cannot accept charge-sheet in a case without the approval of the government, the time limit for sanction is fixed but not all courts pay attention to the fulfilment of these instructions due to which many cases are laying pending in the courts and the detention of the person arrested in these cases is increasing.

The police usually use their stock witnesses to substantiate UAPA cases, in which the witness testifies that the person nominated by the police used to meet such witness or say in a meeting that such nominated person had links with certain organizations, and they want to break up India and build a separate country and for this there will be no shortage of money, ammunition etc. Large claims are usually made in cases registered under UAPA by the police that there was threat to the unity and integrity of the country, there was conspiracy to assassinate some political or religious figure, conspiracy to create conflict between different communities etc. But all these claims fall flat during trials.

So such false stories and phrases fabricated by the police-prosecution-government come to nothing in the courts and the cases are acquitted but the matter does not end here. Whenever any untoward incident occurs in the area or some VIP figure is to visit the area, persons acquitted in UAPA cases are repeatedly rounded up by the police at the pretext of summoning and questioning them. This amounts to an indirect punishment. The sword of another new case always keeps hanging over their head. The life of a person becomes dull under the shadow of terror of draconian UAPA and at times he really takes the path of rebellion.

In the end:

India is a multicultural country but the British enacted a single law in the region to hold it. These lawless laws are a major hindrance in the path of establishing rule of law in this region. These laws are a tool of state repression, which in turn leads to rebellion. In Jammu and Kashmir, North East and many other states special laws like AFSPA are also included in the list of black laws. AFSPA, which grants blind fold impunity to Indian armed forces in so-termed disturbed areas, is the root cause of massive human rights abuses in Kashmir and North East. The broad daylight killings of Naga citizens in the Mon Massacre by Indian forces is a recent example of abuse of AFSPA. The Badal and Captain Government talked about enacting PCOCA law in Punjab on the lines of Maharashtra's MCOCA under which anyone can be kept in jail for up to one year without any reason and the written disclosure of a person before the police is admissible in court. It will be misused as it was done in TADA. In addition, giving magisterial powers to police commissioners in big cities is a violation of democratic rights. There is a need to mobilize the people and build a people's movement against such black laws which would give legal recognition to the cultures, ethnicities, nationalities and historical polities of the Indian subcontinent and build the world as a better place.

I believe that today when darkness with all its strength thrusts itself over the truth, if nothing else, I will say, a proud and noble Punjab is the light that will challenge it.

I pray to the Satguru to keep this light alive.
